Our Definition of Local

We define local as Massachusetts grown and produced as the first preference, and then expanding beyond the state to Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont in New England.

Why Buy Local?

Supporting your local economy, community, and the environment while improving your health is why buying locally is essential. By choosing local products, you're helping reconnect people with food production and strengthening the local food system, especially when you buy wholesale.

A thriving local economy relies on a diverse local food system. The Boston Local Food program, initiated by SBN, prioritizes this goal, striving to provide healthy local food for everyone in Massachusetts and New England.

We believe that each individual, business, organization, and community can contribute to the solution by shifting to local food sources rather than non-local ones. Currently, less than 5% of the food consumed in Massachusetts is local, and we aim to increase this through conscious choices, including wholesale purchases.
